No Benefit Found of 34-Hour Restart Restrictions

A letter issued by the Department of Transportation's Office of Inspector General confirms that truckers operating under 2013 hours of service rules showed no greater safety levels.

As a result, the FMCSA will was unable to enforce the 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. and 168-hour restrictions, and removed them from the rules.

The majority of trucking companies see the results of the study as a major victory.
